PREFACE.

FRANCE is a Nation of too much conſequence in e ſcale of Politics to render an apology for the preſent ork neceſſary: if it be well executed it is ſufficient. But ſt more ſhould be expected than the Editor intended, it ay be proper to ſay, that he means only to give a ſhort eographical Account, not a Political, or Commercial, iſtory of the Towns and Villages of France: And the k is little elſe than a tranſlation of "Dictionnaire Geographique Portatif de la France," which profeſſes to give une connoiſſance exacte des Provinces, Gouvernemens, Villes, Bourgs, Villages, Fleuves, Rivières, Abbayes, &c. qu'il y a dans ce Royaume, avec le nom des Bureaux de Poſte, auxquels il faut addreſſer les lettres, pour les faire parvenir a tous les lieux de la France, et dans le Païs etrangers." n exact account of the Provinces, Governments, Cities, owns, Villages, large and ſmall Rivers, religious Houſes, c. in the kingdom, with the principal Poſt-Offices, by e channel of which letters ſhould be addreſſed, that they ay be ſafely delivered in all parts of France, and other untries.

It may be aſked why the ancient diviſion of Provinces i adopted inſtead of Departments: to this it may be anſwere that beſide the difficulty and almoſt impracticability of the ar rangement being made with preciſion, ſo different from th original, the names of the Provinces ſtill exiſt, and probabl always will: Picardy, Normandy, Languedoc, Provence are well known, and their ſituations with regard to th Departments, will eaſily be found. In the dioceſes th places are brought nearer to our view, and ſtill more ſo b pointing out the Elections and other Juriſdictions in whic each Town or Village is included: which like the religiou Houſes, if they do not always remain, will nevertheles hardly be forgotten.

The diſtances are all computed in French leagues of 2 miles Engliſh each: and where the diſtances have bee taken from the Poſt-Book, each poſt has been ſet down as two leagues; ſuppoſed equal to five miles Engliſh.— The Maps conſulted for Lorraine, &c. are thoſe by Sanſon Bureau de poſte, at the end of a City or Town, denotes it to contain a principal Poſt-Office; and a Letter to a per- ſon in that place requires only the name of the Town and Province; as, à M. M. Barrois, à Lille en Flandre---à M. M. Lauga, à Veſoul, en Franche-Comté, &c. To ſmaller Towns and Villages which have no bureau, the name of the Town from whoſe bureau letters are conveyed, is annexed, and it is neceſſary to add it on a letter; as à M. M. Conflans, à Biot, dans le Viguerie de Graſſe, en Provence, par Antibes---à M. M. Valladon, a Beſcat, dans le dioceſe d'Oléron, en Bearn. par Oléron.

Alſace, a part of Germany ceded rance by the treaty of Munſter, 648, and confirmed by that of wick; it is ſituated on the weſtbanks of the Rhine, which des it from Swabia; on the h it is bordered by the lower tinate and the biſhoprick of Spire; on the ſouth, by Switzerland and Franche-Comté; and to the weſt by Lorraine, from which it is parted by very high mountains: it is diſtinguiſhed by the terms, upper and lower, the former contain the ſouthern parts, and the latter the northern. The rivers that water Alſace, the principal of which are the Rhine and the Ill, contribute much to its fertility. It produces great quantity of corn, wine, flax, tobacco, fruits, &c. It has alſo mineral ſprings, and mines of ſilver, copper, and lead: the mountains which ſeparate it from Lor-rain are for the moſt part covered with trees, firs, oaks, beech, and elms; thoſe next to Switzerland are not ſo lofty, but furniſh much wood both for fuel and buildings; the moſt conſiderable foreſts are thoſe of Hart, Haguenau, and Bien-wald; that of Hart contains thirty thouſand arpents: the whole province is about 40 leagues long, and 11 broad. Straſburg is the capital city; other cities or towns are Amiennois, a ſmall country in Picardy, ſo named from Amiens the capital; it is bounded by Santerre on the Eaſt, by Artois to the North, on the Weſt by Ponthieu and Normandy, and by Beauvoiſis to the South: the land is very fertile in corn and flax. The river Somme runs through it from Eaſt to Weſt.

Amiens, the capital of Picardy, a handſome and large city, ſituated on the river Somme, ſeveral branches of which run through the town; and by means of water engines and fountains in moſt of the ſtreets the town is well ſupplied with water. The cathedral is one of the moſt beautiful in the kingdom; it was built in the 13th century, being begun in the year 1220, and finiſhed in 1269. Among other monuments, that of a weeping child at the back of the great altar is a moſt exquiſite piece of art. Amiens is about 31 leagues from Paris, 12 from Péronne, 14 from Beauvais, 18 from Cambray, 39 from Dunkirk, 26 from Rouen, 38 from Calais, 10½ from Abbeville, and 18 from Compiégne. Bureau de poſte.
